

The proposed rule changes will weaken the ability of journalists to act as an important public safe guard. The country will have even fewer gatekeepers over the news and popular media that informs and influences the public.